Gentlemen:

This is in response to the request for confirmation of a news article posted in the September 25, 2015 issue of the Manila Standard Today (Internet Edition) quoted as follows:

New 600-MW coal plant eyed

By: Alena Mae S. Flores, September 25, 2015 at 11:55 p.m.

“South Luzon Thermal Energy Corp., a joint venture between Trans-Asia Oil and Energy Development Corp. and AC Energy Holdings Inc. of the Ayala Group of Companies, may put up another 600-megawatt coal-fired power plant in Batangas province.

The power plant will serve as an expansion of the 270-MW coal-fired plant that is nearing full completion in the province.

Trans-Asia of the Phinma Group received approval from the Energy Department to conduct a grid impact study for the proposed new 600-MW coal power plant.

The planned new coal project is included in the latest list of projects cleared by the department to conduct an impact study to determine the capability of the grid to absorb the new power capacity. . . .”

We confirm that the Department of Energy has granted clearance to conduct a grid impact study in relation to a 600-MW coal power plant in Batangas province. No investment decision has yet been reached on the proposed plant.

Thank you.

Very truly yours,

ALAN T. ASCALON
